[illegible] of One of the Stock Exchange Forgers.

NEW YORK March 19—McKay accused of writing forged letters to the Stock Exchange on the [illegible] of February, announcing a proposed increase [illegible] Western Union and Toledo and Wabash [illegible] was indicted by the Grand Jury to-day for obtaining goods under false pretenses.

The Massachusetts General Court.

BOSTON March 19—The Senate reconsidered the passage of the ten hour bill and postponed the subject till to-morrow.

The Legislature will vote on the 28th inst for a successor to Sumner.

Indictments Against Sanborn

NEW YORK March 19—The Grand Jury of Brooklyn has found another indictment against Sanborn Hawley and Vanderwarken for conspiring to defraud the Government.

Fire

PORTLAND, (Me.) March 20—Shaw's block at Biddeford containing 15 stores, a billiard hall, and a number of offices, were burned this morning. Loss unknown.

NEW YORK March 20—Gold closed at 111⅞@11[illegible] Governments strong and active money [illegible] Stocks active and strong. Western Union 77¼, Pacific Mail, 44½, New York Central 100¾, Erie 11[illegible], Panama, 114, Union Pacific 71, Central Bonds, 94¾, Union Bonds 84.

Railroad Matters.

NEW YORK March 19—The Erie railway depot laborers here have struck for an increase of wages. The New York Central Pennsylvania Central and Erie railway companies have advanced the price of tickets to all Western points and old rates again rule. Baltimore and Ohio roads did not enter into the arrangement. It is understood there will soon be an increase of western freight rates by all these lines.

Hoar Ahead.

BOSTON March 19—The contest for Senator is the theme in the State House lobbies. It is said that a canvass of the House shows a plurality for Hoar a strong support for Dawes and the same number for Adams.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON March 19—Hager presented a joint resolution of the California legislature protesting against any further subsidy to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. Also a joint resolution of the same body instructing Senators and Representatives from California to use their influence to have articles 5 and 6 of the treaty with China modified so as to discourage the further immigration of Chinese. Referred.

Hager said Chinese Immigration was rapidly assuming such proportions as to require the attention of the Federal Government. The subject is not understood either upon the floor of the Senate or throughout the country.

Chandler from the Committee on Commerce reported favorably on the bill to remove the wreck at the mouth of San Francisco harbor. The bill was placed on the calendar.

More Ugly Developments in the Sanborn Case.

WASHINGTON March 19—It is on record in the War Department that the cost of the Modoc war to the Quartermaster's Department was $8[illegible],000 more than it would have been if the outbreak had not occurred.

From a statement by ex District Attorney Noah Davis of New York, before the Ways and Means Committee to-day, it appears that he advised Jayne and the Customs authorities to accept a compromise in the case of Phelps Dodge & Co. on the basis of the amount involved in the articles affected by the alleged fraud, and that Jayne estimated the amount at some $60,000. The case was to be settled on this basis the day before Davis was to retire from office and on that day while engaged with Bliss his successor in reference to certain cases then on the calendar for trial, Davis spoke of this case and said that though he supposed he was entitled to the whole fees in the case he would divide them with Bliss and asked the latter to accompany him to a conference at which a settlement was to be made. Bliss declined to go, and hesitatingly informed Davis that the case would not be settled that day that he (Davis) had been deceived. Davis then found that [illegible] had privately taken the oath of office [illegible] of appearing in the Court to be sworn [illegible]. Davis advised Jayne to accept a [illegible] as the case was one in which no jury would give a verdict if not instructed. He subsequently, when asked for advice by Phelps, refused to give it as a lawyer but as a friend advised him to fight the case to the end.

The Phelps, Dodge & Co. Investigation.

WASHINGTON March 20—Judge Noah Davis continued before the Ways and Means Committee today the statement of his connection with the revenue cases, particularly that of Phelps Dodge & Co. He said Senator Conkling was present at his interview with the Customs officials in reference to that case, but he believed accidentally and not with reference to the case; but being present, he (Conkling) read the statute and gave an opinion that it was beyond doubt that the whole invoice was forfeited when a part was forfeited, and recommended that a suit for the entire amount of the invoice be commenced against Phelps Dodge & Co. Davis gave an opinion that the statute permitting the seizure of the books and papers was in contravention to the provisions of the Constitution which secures citizens from unreasonable search and seizure and that the statute ought to be repealed.

H. W. Stanton has been elected Mayor of Lewiston J K Vincent, Recorder, W P Hunt, Treasurer, and Dan McElwee, Marshal.

John Leary, from Horse Shoe Bend, tells the Idaho World that a good many sheep are dying in that section, and that stock of all kinds look poor and bad.

The upper town of Tacoma is looking better at this time than ever before, and its people undoubtedly more prosperous and more cheerful than for many previous months.

Charley Young of Lewiston is afflicted with a harmless sort of insanity during his of which he imagines that he owns all creation. He says he had eighty millions in a London Bank which burst up recently.

There are over 6,000 mines and prospects within a circuit of twenty five miles of Salt Lake. The most of these will be actively worked this season, and millions of dollars will be added to the wealth of the Territory.

The Bozeman Courier learns that Dr Wright Agent at the Crow Mission has been notified by the authorities to keep a sharp look out for the hostile Sioux, who were moving in the direction of his Agency from the scenes of their late depredations in Wyoming.

The Idaho Signal hears of quite a number of stock men losing cattle and sheep both on Camas Prairie and the country north of Lewiston. One thing against the welfare of stock this winter is the fact that the grass did not get a start last fall there being but very little rain—something unusual for the country. [illegible] generally there is rain enough [illegible] good.

Whilst affairs in Utah legally and politically can hardly be much worse than they are, it is gratifying to know that apart from the troubles which attach to the remaining [illegible] the outlook for the Territory is [illegible] as could be desired. Large amounts of capital are said to be seeking investment in mining enterprises there the statistics of the past year showing this property to be [illegible] the best of its class in the country. The sooner the barbarous blot which defaces that Territory is wiped out of existence the better [illegible] for its prosperity and for the good name of the Republic.

Of new-comers at Tacoma the Tribune says: "On Friday night last Mr W K Wilson moved his family over from Portland. On Tuesday night, Capt L Smith and family (seven children) moved over from Umatilla. On Saturday night Mr Whittlesey's family will arrive from Kalama. Mr W H Fife writes that he and his family and three other families will leave Cherokee Iowa for Tacoma, W. T., about the first of April."

SOMETHING ABOUT A "SNEAK"

HILLSBORO, March 19 1874

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

The Progressionist man gets very virtuous in his last issue and calls me a coward and says he "hates sneaks." I suppose Holladay's [illegible] feels very brave as long as the valiant Colonel is at his back but I haven't heard of his killing any one yet not even when he was fighting in the rebel army and I have no doubt but he did feel better when he deserted and went to that place [illegible] State of Illinois and afterwards was employed, according to the Clinton Mo [illegible] so to assist in saddling a railroad debt on the State and county. Having proven a failure there he is now saddled on Washington county for the same purpose. No doubt he does hate sneaks. I would if I had his reputation—having according to common report proven an enemy to his Government, he then turned traitor to the South ran as a representative to the Legislature on the Republican ticket in Missouri, was beaten turned traitor to that party went for Greeley came to Oregon, turned traitor and again went in with the Republicans in Washington county, and did all he could to break up the party turned traitor again went off with the "call" turned back again and yesterday was advocating a scratching of tickets because he hated a sneak. Write a few more letters in your office Davis signed "Granger" W [illegible] &c but let Hillsboro alone confine your talent to writing letters for your own paper and "Written Notices." You hate a sneak do you? So do I and so does every other honest man in Washington county. Have you any further vilifications to heap on the people of Hillsboro? Ask the Colonel maybe he can think of something. But Hillsboro asks to be excused from the blame of the Railroad Co because the Democrats of Washington county refused to coalesce with them in the coming campaign.

NOT A GRANGER, NOR TRAITOR.

UMATILLA COUNTY CORRESPONDENCE

WILLOW FORKS UMATILLA Co [illegible]
March 17th 1874

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

At last the winter appears to have broken. The last few days have been warm and pleasant but it did appear that the cold weather that set in last November had got such a hold that it would never let go. More snow and rain has fallen the past winter than for many years before rendering the ground sufficiently wet to produce an abundant crop of grass but the weather has been so cold it has not grown much yet. In some sections stock is dying from starvation while scores have died from the hoof disease. There have fully 200 head of cattle died on this creek. I learn that a great number of sheep have died the losses being quite heavy among such as are diseased. Mr Emerick has lost two hundred or more out of a flock of eleven hundred head.

I am pleased to note how the people in other counties of the State are organizing for carrying on our State and county affairs independent of party ring or clique. I have not heard of any movement of the kind in this county but [illegible] [illegible] hearty support [illegible] of our citizens [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that has had control of the county for eight years.

A BOSTON MERCHANT'S MISTAKE.—The Belfast (Me.) [illegible] says a queer mistake was recently made by a Boston wholesale merchant. Before the schooner A. [illegible] left Boston the agent wrote to the Captain to deposit $500 of the vessel's money with the merchant referred to. When the schooner was two weeks out of time and supposed to be lost the agent wrote to the merchant who replied that he had received no such money. But when the schooner got in the Captain had the merchant's receipt in his pocket.

REPLY TO REV NEHEMIAH DOANE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

In your issue of the 18th inst there appeared a very lengthy communication over the signature of Rev Nehemiah Doane [illegible] points in which I deem it my duty [illegible] attention [illegible] Bro Doane seems to have three objects in view. First to convince the intelligent community [illegible] [illegible] published by [illegible] made statements which [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] readers, secondly to justify Rev W. Roberts in rulings made by him in the preliminary examination and thirdly to prove that the committee was all right in finding those specifications under the charge preferred against me sustained, which they did unanimously.

1 As to any false impressions made by statements in my former communication I know not. If any were made I regret it. I had no such intentions. I endeavored to give the facts as I understood them. Upon hearing of my suspension some thought it was for gambling. Hence fearing that various other reports of a scandalous character might follow I felt it my duty to let my friends in Oregon and Washington Territory know the nature of the charges preferred against me and the circumstances under which the examination was conducted. If I erred in this I do not yet see it.

2 As to the strange defense which Bro Doane makes in behalf of Rev Wm Roberts I see no difficulty. He admits that protests were made against the presiding officer the place of trial the time of trial and the style and manner of the charge and specifications and that they were about all overruled. That is just as I stated. Bro Doane makes the following assertion: "W Roberts was the only man living that could have legally presided in the trial of J F DeVore." As we have thirteen Bishops, any one of whom could have legally presided if present this broad assertion which carries with it a false impression upon minds of readers looks very strange. In the absence of a Bishop the Discipline provides that the Presiding Elder of any adjoining district shall be called in to preside. If there be but one adjoining district I admit that a strict construction of the Discipline fixes upon the Elder of that district as the one to preside. But the very word "any" presupposes more than one adjoining district so that the impropriety of a liberal construction so as to include a tier of two or more districts adjoining so as to give a choice [illegible] is not so great as forcing the chairmanship upon some Elder whose relations to the accused may not admit of his presiding impartially. This was the view taken and I think it correct.

Bro Doane says: "It seemed to the committee that the accused instead of dividing or rather multiplying his protests into many heads should for the sake of economy have put them all together, and labelled it in large capitals thus 'Protests not brought out at all'" Just so. It is a sufficient answer to this to say that it may seem to some others that considering the whole circumstances of the case, and the trivial nature of much of the prosecution all defense was useless because trial and suspension were foregone conclusions.

3 We come now to the third point in our good brother's long communication and which is really the only point worthy of serious consideration namely his labored effort to justify the committee in its action upon the second specification. He admits that but three out of the eleven specifications sustained the charge under which they were written. He examines my comments on the second and proceeds to give the committee's view, saying "the community have had one side—it is fair that they should have the other: they have his version—it is fair they should have ours." Now let us see how the full benefit of every doubt was given to the accused in this specimen instance. The Committee after four days investigation and five hours spent in earnest prayer and study in making up judgment decided unanimously and without any qualification, "That under oath and under special instruction that his compensation should be $10 per day for every day necessarily employed in making said appraisement, he (DeVore) did falsely and covetously charge for thirty six days as engaged in such appraisement when he was not engaged for that length of time."

1 I was under no oath whatever in connection with the charge for thirty six days and there is not a word of evidence to show it. This excellent Bro Doane who is so exceedingly careful about making false impressions presents this matter in his communication in such a way that every disinterested and unsuspicious person will receive the impression that the oath, which I took before U S Commissioner Burns "to honestly and faithfully appraise at a fair cash value the improvements &c," was violated by the charge for thirty six days. Now if Bro Doane intended to make this false impression he is, of course guilty of moral falsehood. But he not only makes that false impression in his communication but he actually [illegible] in the finding of the Committee and they all joined with him. It is absolutely false. I do not say these good men intended it but I do mean to say that the very best of men may sometimes make mistakes.

2 At first I did make out my bill for thirty six days the exact time I was in the employ of the Government making the award Captain G D Hill U S A, and Major J B Montgomery the other members of the Commission—who have both I [illegible] have been for years acquainted with the rules of Government service—all computed their time and pay from the date of their commission to the date of discharge. Capt Hill U S A wrote to me as follows:

"Our letters of appointment simply state that ten dollars per diem and expenses while engaged making the award will be allowed. Now as to the amount charged [illegible] both per diem and [illegible]. It is and always has been the rule in any Government service to compute time from the date of appointment or commission until the date of discharge. I consider that between the first day of Aug [illegible] and the [illegible] of the [illegible] month I was in the employ of the Government making the award. I have so rendered my account and shall [illegible] cent that or nothing."

Subsequently I thought it proper to charge in bill, as to per diem from 36 to 12 days. I also [illegible] [illegible] for expenses and yet Bro Doane says nothing about it making no further [illegible]

4 In making charges for [illegible] days I did not mean to say much less take an oath that I was necessarily employed in making said appraisement actually so many days but that during that period of time I was in the employ of the Government making the award. We found it necessary to adjourn from time to time in order to agree upon an award which we were expected to make.

5 My friend strangely [illegible] to make the following uncharitable [illegible] men whom he knows [illegible] Messrs Hill and Montgomery.

Here Bro DeVore [illegible] [illegible] associated with men evidently interested in the interests of Mr [illegible] [illegible] a large grab from the [illegible] the Government [illegible] [illegible] property [illegible] party had fixed [illegible]

How Bro Doane [illegible] about these gentlemen [illegible] understand [illegible] [illegible] that while I did my [illegible] agree [illegible] award [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the other nearly $20,000.

[illegible] [illegible] the Government [illegible] [illegible] the work of DeVore Montgomery and Hill and appointed a new commission of which [illegible] was Mr [illegible] Brooke of Portland &c. As I understand it the Government did no such thing. One [illegible] to [illegible] himself to do that but as we learn from good authority the award as made by the first commission has been granted by the Government to Mr Webster.

The question now is has Bro Doane stated whether or not the accused DeVore was [illegible] during [illegible] days [illegible] I was the [illegible] under oath to make out his bill for the exact number of days [illegible] employed? 2 Was he specially instructed that his compensation should be $10 per day for only such days as he was actually employed? Did he falsely and covetously charge for more days than he was entitled to? Unless all of these questions could be answered affirmatively the specification could not be sustained [illegible]. But Bro Doane's "judgment" so sustained the specification while no doubt his heart was all right. I express no opinion but give the facts.

First there was no oath in the matter. Second I never understood that we were so instructed. Even the Superintendent in his letter to Hon H P Smith admits that it would be just to allow Messrs DeVore and Montgomery each two days to meet and select the third appraiser. Third my first charge was for 36 days which was mailed to [illegible] subsequently, but in both instances it was made under the impression that it was allowable. If Bro Doane could read my heart under the circumstances and deliberately say that what I did was done falsely and covetously then I must certainly conclude that he has not much control over his judgment.

5 In reviewing Bro Doane's article I see no point omitted which I deemed worthy of noticing unless it be the false impression which will be made by his comments on Superintendent Milroy's letter of instructions. I merely correct it by stating that we were neither required nor expected to make separate reports as Commissioners but to consult together and agree upon the award and when it was completed, then report the same in a sealed form to the Superintendent at Olympia which we did.

Having reviewed thus briefly my friend Doane's vindication of the committee's action on the second specification I am willing to rest the case until Conference. I have only done in this matter what I conceived to be my duty.

MARION COUNTY CORRESPONDENCE

THE POLITICAL SITUATION IN MARION—WHAT THE FARMERS WANT—THE DEMAND OF THE HOUR

SILVERTON March 1[illegible] 1874

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

I see occasionally in your columns letters from different sections of the State in regard to the state of political affairs, and I take it for granted that such intelligence is as welcome to the rest of your readers as it is to me.

The ball was set in motion some time since in Marion county for an independent ticket and from the first day it has grown more and more popular. I speak particularly of the rural districts, for I know but little about politics in Salem. Among the farmers there is almost unanimity upon the proposition that we do not want any partyism in this election and that the best thing for the country the best thing for taxpayers, is to put up the best men we can select and elect them, whether they have heretofore belonged to one party or the other. What we want is that all unnecessary expense in running the Government shall be cut off. We in the country do not calculate to make our living by holding office and since we are called upon to pay the expenses of those who do live that way we think we have good right to demand that the work required to be done for the public be done as cheaply as it can be well done. We do not want to continue on paying to the Clerks and Sheriffs more money than three or four such men as they are respectively could earn at any legitimate business. We are willing to allow them to make good wages and on account of the responsibility of their places we do not object to their receiving even more than they could make as book-keepers or livery stable keepers or whatever they may do when out of office but we think it is sticking it to us a little too heavy when they receive in one year more than we farmers can make in ten while we work all the time from daylight till dark and often more hours than that and they work about six hours a day and easy work at that.

And we think it is about time that all things in relation to the spending of the public money should be overhauled. The State does not grow any more populous nor demand any more expensive government, yet every year the tax levy grows larger either by higher assessment of property or by the levy of a higher rate of tax and sometimes both. We want men to go to the Legislature who will take hold of these matters and will go through them as you have said several times in detail lopping off wherever it can be done and thus giving us the cheap government and low taxes that we used to have. We have tried both parties and they have done nothing but make matters worse and worse continually. In their eagerness to build up their party or take care of their friends our legislators have overlooked the necessities of the people and allowed themselves to be used to carry jobs through at our expense. Many of them have been good enough men and by our independent action we do not mean to say that all the men we have heretofore put in office were bad men. All we say is that they have failed us, and we are resolved to find the remedy for the evil in other ways since we have failed to find it in the party machinery.

For this purpose we have set in motion the independent movement in Marion county and we expect to co-operate with those in other counties who are seeking the same ends through the same means. It cannot be predicted with absolute certainty what will be the result in this county, as party politics is always stronger here than nearly any other county in the State and the Democratic administration uses all its power to keep lines drawn but it looks now as if the independents would carry even Marion. Many of the best informed [illegible] here think it is sure to be.

WHITE HOUSE MATRIMONIAL GOSSIP.—And now the different matrimonial engagements are announced. Miss Grant's marriage to Mr Sartoris is fixed for October next. Mr Sartoris is the son of Adelaide Kemble and nephew to Fanny Kemble Butler. The young man traveled with Mrs Grant upon her return from Europe to [illegible] three years ago. He did not [illegible] [illegible] West on his journey. Happening to be in St Louis when the President visited there last spring, and witnessing the homage that was paid him on that [illegible] it seemed to dawn upon the mind of the young man that the daughter of the American President was not altogether [illegible]. He made known his [illegible] to the young lady's father who rejected him on account of the want of fortune [illegible] and the President [illegible] [illegible] slowly and he might have added that our republican form of government [illegible] salary being voted by Congress when a member of the royal family marries. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] President and said that Miss Nellie [illegible] her comfortably on forty thousand dollars a year. This promised a royal [illegible] and, after a few preliminaries the engagement [illegible] [illegible] So there is something to stir us all up next fall. I am told that the Sartoris House near London is the resort of all authors artists and celebrities. Those who know Miss Nellie's fondness for dancing have asked if there was a ball room and did the old folks enjoy the German. No doubt that Miss Nellie will prove herself a true American girl who can fill and adorn any station. Colonel Fred Grant's fiancée Miss Kitty Cooke has returned from Europe and is a perfect beauty. She is lovely in character too and I hope the young man appreciates his good fortune.—Washington Letter [illegible] Louisville Courier Journal.

OREGON

There were [illegible] marriages in Umatilla county last year.

The wife of Rev W [illegible] Stewart died at Salem last Wednesday evening after a lingering illness.

The steam flouring mill at Lafayette is to be put in operation soon under the management of Mr Smalley.

Two citizens of Lafayette usually staid persons at that had a bit of scrimmage the other day. It cost one of them a little blood and the other $18 10.

A number of the friends of Prof Macrum of Oregon City assembled at his residence last Tuesday evening and presented him with a valuable set of law books.

The following persons have been elected officers of the Board of Delegates of the Oregon City Fire Department: I T Barin President, M C Athey Secretary, H J Harding, Treasurer.

The Enterprise confirms the report that a case of smallpox exists in Oregon City but says: "Every precaution has been taken to prevent its spread and hope soon to chronicle its disappearance."

Frank Rinearson had the misfortune to cut his foot nearly off while at work at one of the fisheries down on the Columbia a short time since. He returned home to Oregon City last week and is getting along as well as could be expected.

At a meeting of the woman suffragists held in the Court House at Oregon City Monday evening, the 16th inst, J DeVore Johnson was chosen President, S M McCown and Mrs I [illegible] Eastham Vice Presidents, Mrs Edmunds Secretary.

J J Herman of Rock Creek Clackamas county this week shipped 1084 lbs of bacon, raised and cured by him to the Portland market which realized him about 11 cents per lb. This is the largest shipment of bacon leaving this county.

A man named Morris Broderick, who lives a few miles from Oregon City was arrested Wednesday evening by Henry Hedges Deputy Sheriff and lodged in jail to await the return of Judge White when he will doubtless be sent to the Asylum. He was regarded as dangerous by both his family and neighbors and it was with much difficulty that he was arrested. He has been in the Asylum before.

Charles Ross called on E B Frazer lately at Bethel and he was just from Ohio wanted clothes and wanted work. Now Frazer has kindness enough to respond to such cases so he took Ross in and Ross took him rather unhandsomely in return because he got an advance of eight dollars worth of clothes on account of work to be done and then left without leaving work to show his industry.

The Statesman has been shown a letter received from the Santiam, twenty-five miles from Salem in which the writer says that the depth of snow at the present time is without precedent in that vicinity. In the valley the snow is fully two feet in depth, while in the Cascade mountains only a few miles distant, it lies to a depth of twenty feet. At no time within the memory of the oldest inhabitant has the snow been known to reach so great a depth so low down in the valley. And the writer adds should this snow go off with a rain it would flood the valley.

The Grand Jury for Marion county report as follows: "We have examined the different public offices in the county and find them in good condition and as far as we are able to determine well kept and the public records in good condition. We have also examined the County Jail and find the same clean and in proper condition. Also, we visited the State Penitentiary and were well pleased with the buildings accommodations the appearance and general health of the convicts as well as the vigilance and accommodations offered us by the officers in charge."

The Pendleton Tribune says: "A good flouring mill is much needed in Pendleton and were one built we believe it would prove a good investment. Many farmers go thirty miles and more for flour and while at Walla Walla they do their trading, thus building up that flourishing city at the expense of citizens in and around Pendleton. The best of water power is here going to waste daily. The people are here to sustain such an undertaking and a much larger quantity of wheat would be raised in this portion of Umatilla county if there were a good mill here to convert it into flour after being raised."

The Tribune of the 18th inst says: "We have reports from all parts of Umatilla county relative to cattle and they are anything but flattering. Although spring has fairly set in and the grass is growing finely yet many cattle were so reduced previously that they pass in their checks notwithstanding. It is very hard to state what per cent of cattle have died thus far in this county. All our stock men with whom we have conversed seem afraid to give an opinion not having sufficient reliable data on which to base a judgment. It is safe however to say that it has been quite heavy."

Last Friday morning, Theodore Price a youth nineteen years old confined in the Umatilla County Jail on a charge of larceny managed to break open the cell door and leave for parts unknown. Sheriff Nye and his deputies immediately started in pursuit and Monday evening last Mr Wells and the Sheriff returned having the fugitive in charge and he is now occupying his old quarters. It is said that Price should not be condemned very severely for several reasons. It is stated that he worked around and had by thrift $60 and that some gamblers out in his neighborhood enticed him into their den and won his money by putting up what is technically termed a "cold deck." Price watched his opportunity and getting hold of the wallet of him who had won his money took therefrom $60 leaving the balance ($400) untouched.

TREE HABITATIONS IN THE SOUTH SEA ISLANDS.—Among the papers presented to the British Parliament relating the South Sea Islands is a report by Captain C H Simpson of Her Britannic Majesty's ship Blanche giving an account of his visit in 1872 to the Solomon and other groups of Islands in the [illegible] Ocean. While at Ysabel Island Captain Simpson with a party of officers went a short distance inland to visit one of the curious tree villages peculiar he believes, to this island. He found the village built on the summit of a rocky mountain rising almost perpendicularly to a height of eight hundred feet. The party ascended by a narrow path and found the extreme summit a mass of enormous rock standing up like a castle among which grew gigantic trees in the branches of which the houses of the natives are built. The stems of the trees rise perfectly straight and smooth without a branch to a height of from fifty to one hundred and fifty feet. In the one Captain Simpson ascended the house was just eighty feet from the ground, one close to it was about one hundred and twenty feet. The only means of approach to the houses is by a ladder made of a creeper suspended from a post within the house, and which of course can be hauled up at will.—Golden [illegible] for March.

The smelt fishers on Great Bay New Hampshire each have a hole in the ice which the fisher cuts at the beginning of the season and from which the young ice is daily removed. The right of each fisherman to his established hole is sacredly observed. Recently a veteran fisher of more than three score years and ten was found at a hole claimed by another fisherman. "This is my hole" said the young fisher. "No it is not" said the veteran, "I cut it early in the winter," followed the younger. "I can't help it" said the old one, "I cut it first." "When was that may?" inquired the junior. "I cut it last winter" was the unanswerable rejoinder.

A Rare Chance for a Good Physician.

AS MY HEALTH IS IN SUCH A CONDITION that I cannot endure the exposure and hardship consequent upon country practice I offer to sell my residence situated in Hillsboro, the County Seat of Washington County Oregon upon the most reasonable terms with a good practice thrown in the extent of which may be ascertained by addressing the undersigned or examining his books personally.

The property consists of 2 lots 98x200 feet each enclosed with a picket fence and sidewalk in front located on Main st Hillsboro, 1 block from the Court House with a good dwelling house office and barn, also a never failing well of water, bricked in and various fruit trees and vines growing thriftily. All of which I will sell for $1,000 in cash or one half cash and the remaining half on one year's credit, with 12 per cent. interest, secured by mortgage.

Title guaranteed.

I will also sell a No 1 Saddle Horse with Saddle, Bridle and Saddlebags together with Household Furniture (if desired) at a greatly reduced price.

Hillsboro is situated in one of the most wealthy farming localities in the State and has a population of about 600 inhabitants and has a railroad running through the place. There is but one practising Physician in the place excepting myself and giving as much business as both can do.

My object for selling is as above stated and for the purpose of commencing city practice. Any good Physician wishing a good country practice cannot find a better place and will do well to call and see for himself or address me for any information. Address as above.

THE RATIONALE OF THE INDEPENDENT MOVEMENT

Those who have affected to consider the independent movement in this State as nothing but the device of a few malcontents to get even for personal grievances must begin to see by this time how greatly they have mistaken the facts. If there were no other evidence of the erroneousness of such an idea the number of the persons who have already openly espoused the movement would be evidence sufficient to satisfy the most skeptical mind for it is impossible to unite so great a number of persons of diverse political antecedents upon the mere personal grievances of any one man no matter what may be his eminence. Such a thing was never yet accomplished and it never will be while human nature remains what it is. When a number of persons reaching into the thousands out of a population so small as ours who have heretofore acted with different political organizations united and cooperated heartily and in a public manner to secure a change in the administration of the laws regardless of party ties, it is safe to say the grievances of which they complain are not of a merely personal character and that the evils they propose to redress are such as vitally affect the common welfare. The reforms demanded by the people, and for the security of which this uprising has taken place, are public in their character and definite in their scope. They say that there are certain extravagances practiced in the administration of the public affairs of the country, that might be avoided by the exercise of reasonable care and attention on the part of the officers, and that these extravagancies have to be paid for by taxation upon the non-officeholding masses, and they naturally consider this unjust. They say there have been ways devised to evade the Constitution of the State, and give many of the officers of the State, by indirect means far greater compensation for their services than the Constitution, which is the great charter of the people's rights, authorizes, and they consider this inequitable and wrong. They say the funds of this State that ought to be appropriated only to such objects as the general welfare demands have been frequently, and to very large amounts, given out in private and local jobs, and they consider this a practice that should not be tolerated.

They say that all these evils are of public concern and of alarming extent, and they see no reason to hope for remedy through the regular political organizations. These have so often and so solemnly promised reformation and so utterly failed to fulfill their pledges that it is madness to expect any reformation from them. The only resource remaining is that to which they have now resorted, namely the selection of officers with especial reference to the evils to be remedied, and who will not acknowledge any such allegiance to party as will disqualify them to do their duty by the people. That is what the independent movement in the State of Oregon means, and it will triumph. The people are not going to turn back after putting their hand to the plough as they have done in this matter.

BY PROXY.

At the Democratic ratification meeting at Salem Hon. J. H. Slater addressed the audience for Mr. La Dow, the nominee for Congress, giving as his reason for doing so, that that gentleman did not make speeches. This is probably the first time in the history of politics in the United States that a man has been nominated for Congress who was unable to express his thoughts in public. How would Mr. La Dow get along with the advocacy of such measures as the interests of his State required to be urged upon Congress? In case of his election (which will not happen) is it the intention of the Democracy to send Slater to Washington to speak for him there?

We have not the pleasure of an acquaintance with Mr LaDow, but have been informed he is a very genial and excellent gentleman, and we do not doubt that such is the case. But it does not follow that he is a suitable person to represent the State in the National Legislature. We know many gentlemen who are genial, intelligent, excellent in many respects, but whom we could never be brought to regard as proper material of which to make Congressmen. A man who would be an efficient and influential member of Congress, must be able not only to think but to express his thoughts. He who is wanting in this qualification is so essentially wanting that his elevation would be a folly of which no intelligent community should be guilty.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

THE GILDED AGE. a Tale of To-day. By Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) and Charles D. Warner. A. Roman & Co. San Francisco.

It is needless to say that this work is unique. The name of Mark Twain is a sufficient guarantee of that. But this book is in some respects more amusing than either of Clemens' former volumes and is in all respects superior to them in point of literary merit. The characteristics of the author of "Roughing It" and "Innocents Abroad," brought into combination with those that mark the writer of "Backlog Studies" could not fail to make a book that everybody would enjoy. This book takes off the follies of American business speculation as handsomely as the Innocents Abroad did the pilgrimages to the Holy Land.

SALEM CORRESPONDENCE

A LARGE DOCKET CLEARED—HOW THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINEES WERE RECEIVED AT SALEM—STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

SALEM March 19 1874

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

The past two weeks have been consumed by the Circuit Court which brought into the city a large number of persons and some of them involuntarily. [illegible] term and a large docket were cleared.

A large number of persons went from the city to Albany to attend the Democratic State Convention and some of them came back with a large [illegible] and [illegible] on their Democratic honor that the Convention was packed or in other words everything was cut and dried and Marion county only got two of the candidates. Some hours before the steamer Gov. Grover arrived bringing most of the Convention, hand-bills were distributed announcing that a grand reception would be given, that amid firing of cannon and stirring music by the Salem brass band a procession would march to the Opera House and be dismissed until evening when a tremendous ratification meeting would be held. Consequently quite a number gathered on the river bank—some to participate and others to look on. The steamer came in due time and on landing a feeble effort at three cheers was made mostly by boys, as their tenor voices plainly indicated—so feeble that a second attempt was postponed. The band started up town blowing for dear life and their pay while the crowd straggled behind some hurrying forward to wet dry whistles others laboring under the effects of too much previous wetting and all indifferent to the occasion. One gentleman said that the crowd was three hours passing a certain point—the Chemeketa saloon—and it was decidedly the most enthusiastic place in the city judging from the numerous attempts to cheer and deplete the contents of the bar. In the evening a

GRAND RATIFICATION MEETING

Was held at the Opera House but it was impossible to create much enthusiasm, and the crowd was not as large as was expected.

The first speaker was Gov Grover who thanked the audience for the enthusiastic reception and then the Convention for his nomination after which he launched out in generalities in his usual inimitable style pledging himself to support the ticket and get elected if possible. He thought the ticket a good one.

The next speaker was Mr Slater who represented the candidate for Congress, Mr LaDow, who he intimated was a good man but could not speak—therefore he (Slater) would speak for him which he did by launching forth into the financial condition of the country—which he predicted was going to the demnition bow wows—and the only way to save it was to vote for and elect the Democratic ticket if possible. Many were the long string of figures that he rattled off, that no mortal man could remember or had any use for. This gentleman continued so long that the crowd became tired which manifested itself so plainly that he desisted, but said that he was sorry that he had not time to enter more fully on that exceedingly interesting subject.

The next speaker was Hon S F Chadwick who did not detain the audience a great while and evidently was not prepared for the occasion, although a decided improvement on his predecessors.

After these followed Mart Brown candidate for State Printer. Then the fun commenced, as he tried and in a measure succeeded in creating a laugh which to say the least was a relief. He said he thought that the great and enthusiastic reception at the river bank was for him but the Governor and the rest had claimed it all so he supposed that the crowd had forgotten him.

The next speaker was Mr Storey, who requested to be called out so as to give the denial to an article in the Daily Statesman that he was a Republican and had his pockets full of Democratic proxies. He was waxing gloriously indignant when most of the crowd took a notion to leave. In fact so many left that the undersigned not wishing to be left alone and in the dark went also. If there were any others spoke I did not hear them.

On the whole the ticket in this city, is not well received and a good many Democrats are wearing very long faces especially the warm political friends of Mr Simpson who has spent considerable time in perfecting the school system and has lived in this State from youth while his successful competitor Rev D. J. Dawne has lived here but a short time. Mr Dawne is a Southern Methodist preacher and many claim as such should keep out of politics.

STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

The Board of Directors of the State Agricultural Society met in this city last Tuesday and finished yesterday but the Secretary being busy I have not been able to obtain any of their proceedings. Many and important changes in their rules have been made which will greatly redound to the interest of all who wish to attend the next Annual Fair.

In commenting on the Tichborne verdict the N. Y. Tribune remarks that nothing has ever been attempted so absurd, so insane one may almost say, as the scheme of the Australian butcher to make himself a baronet and a millionaire by simple lying. It thinks that after this trial people must overhaul and revise their ideas of the impossible and that it has changed men's opinions as to the worth of human evidence. The Tribune adds

He was defeated at last by two things—by his own statement in regard to Mrs Radcliffe which all England instinctively cried could not have been made by a man born a gentleman and by the evidence of Lord Bellew who said he had tattooed Sir Roger in his boyhood. Remove these two comparatively unimportant incidents from the case, and it is not impossible that the craziest crime against rank and property ever attempted might have succeeded by form of law in the most aristocratic country of earth.

THAT WATCH

HOW THIEVES ARE KEPT FROM STARVING

Inquiries are made as to how Thurlow Weed managed to recover his stolen watch, and the New York correspondent of the Utica Herald pretends to know, and doubtless does know all about it. The recovery of the watch he says which was announced in the Herald two days before its occurrence from the correct interpretation of an advertisement shows how thieves communicate with their victim in a manner which is worthy of the term free and easy. You can address a personal to a thief and receive an answer and this may be repeated any length of time without leading to detection. In Mr Weed's case the thief sent word through some detective probably who shares his spoil as a matter of arrangement. The reply came through an advertisement. A certain sum no doubt much larger than the value of the watch is mentioned in addition to the immunity from arrest. The money is placed in the hands of the detective who meets the thief, and they divide the spoil. The watch is returned to Mr Weed at the police office, where the detective generally refuses to accept any fee for his trouble. This sounds well in the papers but those who understand police matters will see through the surface. Detectives do not work for mere compliments. I presume the return of the watch cost Mr Weed $500 and that the detectives got at least one half. If there were no detectives we [illegible] inclined to remark the thieves would starve to death.—R[illegible] Democrat and Chronicle

A NEW THREAT.—The N. Y. Times says: Mr Wilson of Iowa has introduced a bill in the House which is calculated to meet a great public want. It provides for the establishment of the Department of Agriculture as an Executive Department the head of which shall be a member of the Cabinet with the title of Secretary of Agriculture. What the country wants just now is a few more Departments and plenty of places in each. Then the Agricultural Department can be divided up into bureaus, as for instance, of the Cucumber, the Cauliflower and the Squash, the Potato Bug, the Grasshopper and the Weevil.

[illegible] was arrested yesterday for the [illegible] larceny [illegible] pairs of pants. [illegible] came [illegible] a few days ago. On Tuesday [illegible] the pairs of pants were stolen from the store of Jacobs Bros & Co. The officers [illegible] to ferret out the matter [illegible] being [illegible] the officers a very minute description [illegible] Wood [illegible] Sullivan [illegible] a very [illegible] matter [illegible] for the purpose of spending [illegible] from Gervais where he had been working for some months. While [illegible] acquainted with the fellow [illegible] character [illegible] Wood had not the slightest knowledge [illegible] When he first came down [illegible] Wood [illegible] he had about $100 in coin. [illegible] Wood [illegible] state [illegible] Tuesday and Wednesday [illegible] natural sequence when he [illegible] he found every dollar gone. He told Sullivan that he was dead broke but that [illegible] jestin [illegible] there was no excuse for getting broke in a city like Portland. He [illegible] take these pants and go and sell them. Wood [illegible] supposed he came by them honestly and took the stolen goods with the result above mentioned. Sullivan wasn't visible to the naked eye yesterday but several officers are closely on his track so that he will likely be in limbo before morning. Wood was placed in jail being unable to furnish bonds. This morning the case will be inquired into. The three pairs of pants are valued at $18. Being found in bad company is what played the deuce with poor Tras.

NOT THE MAN.—In our issue of Feb 28th we published an account of a Frenchman residing on the Cowlitz river in Washington Territory who contracted a matrimonial alliance with a young lady of [illegible] under circumstances somewhat romantic. A correspondent writing from Hardscrabble, Lewis county says he thinks we are [illegible] taken about the good character of the Frenchman in question. There is a Frenchman he says, who resides in Hardscrabble who is worth in the sum of hogs and cows [illegible] them valuable property, say $700 in [illegible] effects, and he was never known for [illegible] years to be on [illegible] terms with [illegible] his neighbors at one time [illegible] self well armed against his own [illegible] here for some three years and [illegible] on the subject of matrimony. [illegible] the pardon of our correspondent. He is [illegible] taken in the identity of the two men. Our romantic Frenchman sustained no such disagreeable a fellow as he would wish to make it appear.

ABOUT LOW FREIGHTS.—A correspondent states that Mr Snodgrass a merchant at Orodell Union county Oregon writes to a friend in Boise concerning freight from [illegible] and to Boise and informs him that he [illegible] arrangements with the O S N Co and with the agents of the proposed [illegible] line of San Francisco steamships by which merchants in Idaho can procure their goods at a less expense than is attainable by the Union Pacific Railroad via Kelton. The writer states that the great majority of goods necessary for the Idaho trade can be purchased more cheaply in Portland than in the East and asks him to communicate this information to his brother merchants and [illegible] them to order goods with the express purpose of ascertaining the actual coin difference in favor of the Western route.

FOR THIRTY DAYS.—John Dougherty a juvenile offender aged about eleven years was arraigned in the Police Court yesterday morning. This boy was charged with having stolen a quantity of lead pipe which he sold. His guilt having been established beyond all doubt the Court sentenced him to the county jail for a period of thirty days. Some weeks ago this same boy was arrested for stealing pigeons. Several pair of these birds estimated by the owner to be worth about $20 a [illegible] were of a rare and valuable breed [illegible] for the [illegible] sum of twenty [illegible] each. Owing to the tender age of the offender the Court discharged him with [illegible]. This time however the Court [illegible] concluded to give him a [illegible] lesson.

UNION TEMPERANCE MEETING.—There will be a Union Temperance meeting held in the Taylor street M. E. Church to-morrow (Sabbath) evening. Exercises will [illegible] Presbyterian Methodists Congregational and Baptist have already united in the meeting. [illegible] invitation is extended by the Ladies' Temperance Prayer League to other denominations [illegible] agreeable to their pastors to join [illegible]. The entire public [illegible] vited. Should the auditorium prove insufficient to accommodate those in attendance the lecture room of the church will be opened and the speakers divided between the two meetings.

[illegible] was received [illegible] of Or[illegible] Chas [illegible] of the place has [illegible] states that Mr Warren [illegible] in the town. Mr Warren was in this city a little more than two weeks [illegible] health. [illegible]

[illegible]—We understand that Mrs J. C. Van Rensselaer believing that her husband would [illegible] more likely to recover [illegible] in New York has concluded to take him East [illegible]. An application to Judge Hamilton to [illegible] Mrs Van [illegible] guardian of [illegible] has been denied [illegible]

BAD COMPANY—ITS CONSEQUENCE.—A [illegible] named Wood was arrested yesterday for the larceny of three pairs of pants. Th[illegible] came from Gervais a few days ago. On Tuesday sometime, three pairs of pants were stolen from the store of Jacobs Bros & Co. The o[illegible]cers were noticed and began to ferret out the [illegible] matter. They soon came across one of the stolen pair [illegible] who was wearing one of the stolen pair. On being interrogated he said he had purchased the pants for $2 from a man of whom he gave the officers a very minute description. So per[illegible] the description that the officers had [illegible] the officers laid their optics on Wood that they knew him to be the identical man. After being arrested Wood confessed that he had sold the pants but he contended that he never stole them, that they were given him by a well known thief named Sullivan. Wood tells a very plain, straightforward story about the matter. He states that he came down to Portland on Monday for the purpose of spending St Patrick's day from Gervais where he had been working for some months. While here he became acquainted with this fellow Sullivan, concerning whose notoriously bad character he (Wood) had not the slightest knowledge. Sullivan contrived to ingratiate himself into Wood's good graces by lies and misrepresentations. When he first came down Wood says he had about $100 in coin. Sullivan and another covey of kindred ill adroitly managed to keep Wood in a half intoxicated state during Tuesday and Wednesday, and as a natural consequence when he came to himself he found every dollar gone. He told Sullivan that he was "dead broke" but that fellow [illegible] said there was no necessity for getting broke in a city like Portland. Here, said he, take these pants and go and sell them. Wood foolishly supposed he came by them honestly and took the stolen goods with the result above mentioned. Sullivan wasn't visible to the naked eye yesterday, but several officers are closely on his track so that he will [illegible] be in limbo before morning. Wood was locked in jail being unable to furnish bonds. This morning the case will be inquired into. The three pairs of pants are valued at $18. Being found in bad company is what placed [illegible] in [illegible]dence with Poor Tray.

NOT THE MAN.—In our issue of Feb 25th we published an account of a Frenchman residing on the Cowlitz river in Washington Territory who contracted a matrimonial [illegible] with a young lady of this city under circumstances somewhat romantic. A correspondent, writing from Hardscrabble Lewis [illegible] says he thinks we are surely mistaken [illegible] the good character of the Frenchman [illegible] question. There is a Frenchman he says [illegible] resides in Hardscrabble who is worth [illegible] the sum of hogs and cows. If you call [illegible] valuable property say $700 in all effects and he was never known for four years to [illegible] on speaking terms with more than two of [illegible] neighbors at one time. He has kept himself [illegible] armed against his own and only brother [illegible] for some three years and is insane on [illegible] subject of matrimony. We beg the pardon of our correspondent. He is simply mistaken in the identity of the two men. Our [illegible] romantic Frenchman ain't no such disagreeable fellow as he would wish to make it [illegible].

LOW FREIGHTS.—A cotemporary [illegible] that Mr Snodgrass, a merchant at Oro [illegible], Union county, Oregon, writes to a friend [illegible] concerning freight from Portland to [illegible] and informs him that he has effected arrangements with the O S N Company and [illegible] the agents of the proposed opposition [illegible] of San Francisco steamships, by which [illegible] in Idaho can procure their goods [illegible] expense than is attainable by the [illegible] Pacific Railroad via Kelton. The writer [illegible] that the great majority of goods needed [illegible] for the Idaho trade can be purchased [illegible] cheaply in Portland than in the East, and asks him to communicate this information [illegible] his brother merchants and invite them to order goods with the express purpose of ascertaining the actual coin difference in favor of the Western route.

FOR THIRTY DAYS.—John Dougherty, a juvenile offender aged about eleven years, was arraigned in the Police Court yesterday morning. This boy was charged with having stolen a quantity of lead pipe, which he sold. His guilt having been established beyond all doubt the Court sentenced him to the County [illegible] for a period of thirty days. Some weeks ago this same boy was arrested for stealing [illegible]. Several pair of these birds estimated by the owner to be worth about $20 as they were of a rare and valuable breed, were sold [illegible] the insignificant sum of twenty five cents [illegible]. Owing to the tender age of the offender [illegible] Court discharged him with a good lecture [illegible] time however, the Court very wisely [illegible] to give him a more salutary lesson.

[illegible] TEMPERANCE MEETING.—There will [illegible] Union Temperance meeting held in the [illegible] street M E Church to-morrow (Sab[illegible]) evening. Exercises will begin at 7 30. [illegible] Methodists Congregationists [illegible] Baptists have already united in this meeting. [illegible] cordial invitation is extended by the [illegible] Temperance Prayer League to other [illegible], if agreeable to their pastor [illegible] this effort. The entire public is [illegible]. Should the auditorium prove insufficient [illegible] accommodate those in attendance the lec[illegible] of the church will be opened and [illegible] divided between the two meet[illegible].

[illegible] CONFIRMED.—A letter was received [illegible] yesterday evening from Mr Bacon [illegible] which confirms the report that E Warren Esq of that place has [illegible] The note states that Mr Warren [illegible] with a malignant type of that loath[illegible] scourge and as per consequence there is [illegible] excitement in the town. Mr Warren [illegible] this city a little more than two weeks [illegible] perfect health. As he has not been ex[illegible] to the disease so far as he knows it is un[illegible] matter how he contracted it [illegible].

[illegible]—We understand that Mrs J C [illegible] that her husband [illegible] more likely to recover his wonted [illegible] some of the asylums for the inebriates [illegible] has concluded to take him last [illegible] this afternoon on board the steamer [illegible]. An application to Judge [illegible] to appoint Mrs Van [illegible] guardian of her husband has been denied and [illegible] Schuyler Jr still continues to act in [illegible] capacity.

[illegible] CLEARED.—Construction trains which [illegible] the two seasons past conveyed immense [illegible] of earth from the summit along [illegible] road to Couch's lake has as a [illegible] result, scattered considerable gravel [illegible] about the track. Especially on B [illegible] North Third streets, has this debris been [illegible] along much to the annoyance of [illegible]. We are gratified to state that in a few [illegible] all this earth and gravel will be carted [illegible] and dumped into the lake.

[illegible] WIND.—Late on Thursday evening [illegible] telegraphic operator at Walla Walla [illegible] a dispatch to the O S N Co's office in [illegible] city announcing the fact that [illegible] wind was blowing on the mountains [illegible] of that place and that the snow was [illegible] melting in consequence. Should this [illegible] continue for a [illegible] of two [illegible] immediate rise in the Columbia [illegible].

PAY UP WITHOUT DELAY.—Tax pa[illegible] not forget that [illegible] when the law req[illegible] delinquent. We are requested to [illegible] all [illegible] Sheriff as prescribed by law [illegible] accordingly. Delay [illegible] unnecessary [illegible].

INQUEST HELD.—[illegible] yesterday over the remains of [illegible] who was instantly killed in T[illegible] by a caving bank a few miles be[illegible] by Coroner Dyer. The verdict [illegible] was in accordance with the circumstances [illegible] narrated in the OREGONIAN of [illegible]. The body was interred at St Johns.

[illegible].—Mr R. Elford manager of the [illegible] troupe started for Walla Walla [illegible] morning. On arriving at the Dalles he [illegible] overland for Walla Walla at which [illegible] he will rejoin the other members of the [illegible] troupe [illegible].

THE WORK MOVES FORWARD

The Union Temperance Prayer Meeting held in the basement of the Taylor street M E Church last evening by the friends of the temperance movement was one of the most interesting and profitable meetings of the character since the inauguration of the present [illegible]. The vestry was crowded and the exercises throughout [illegible] characterized by a deep feeling [illegible]. [illegible] exercises [illegible] prayer by Rev Mr Izer [illegible] after which Mr Izer addressed the audience in a earnest eloquent manner. At the conclusion of [illegible] remarks an invitation was extended [illegible] who desired to relate their experience [illegible] who have taken [illegible] in canvassing the city for signers to the temperance pledge invited to state the result of their individual effort [illegible] [illegible] ladies had attended the earnest [illegible] behalf of the [illegible] to relate instances or incidents [illegible] with their efforts [illegible] conversation with whom [illegible] the reception [illegible] the [illegible] of the city. Availing of the opportunity a number of ladies who have taken an active part [illegible] visiting saloons calling upon [illegible] citizens without distinction [illegible] talking temperance and earnestly soliciting signatures addressed the meeting. Without an exception they testified that a degree of success far beyond their most sanguine expectations had attended their labors thus far. At least two third of those to whom application was made to sign the pledge readily and cheerfully gave their signatures not unoccupied in many instances with a prayerful desire expressed that the noble work might move forward to triumph and that the day may speedily dawn when intemperance, the great curse of the present century should be banished from the continent. These ladies stated that they had called at a number of saloons in the course of their work. They were uniformly treated with great courtesy and respect by those who are engaged in the liquor traffic. Although all the saloon keepers declined to sign the pledge they generally admitted to the ladies that the traffic in which they were engaged was an unholy one, that their hearts were enlisted in the cause, that they were ready and willing to do all in their power to aid the cause of temperance. One saloon keeper in particular avowed his disgust of the trade and assured the ladies that he hoped the time was not distant when whisky shall be banished from the land. Among those who signed the pledge were many wives some of whom have saloon keepers for husbands. Others were willing and desirous of signing, but were not bold enough to face the opposition their actions would be certain to evoke. In many cases, whole families signed the pledge. The prospects are certainly encouraging and the friends of the cause feel inspired with renewed hopes of its ultimate success. In their rounds the County Jail was visited. Nearly all the prisoners confined there were young men who confessed to the ladies that the crimes for which they were imprisoned had without an exception been committed by them while under the influence of strong drink. Every one signed the pledge but expressed doubt about their being able to withstand temptation when liberated. They said so long as the cause was suffered to remain, they could hardly hope to free themselves from the embrace of that terrible irresistible habit. Remove the temptation beyond their reach and then they might hope to reform. A copy of the Bible and a number of religious books, tracts and papers were distributed among these inmates. Up to last night 1 419 names were obtained to the pledge of total abstinence. Meanwhile the work moves forward to victory. To-morrow evening another Temperance meeting will be held.

FASHION NOTES.

We substitute the annexed sketch of a St Louis bride (Miss Carrie Frank) and her elegant [illegible] as given by a gifted Jenkins in place of the usual notes on fashion trusting that it will be equally interesting to the ladies.

The bride is a beautiful brunette tall and slender with black expressive eyes dark hair and a sweet expression of face.

The wedding dress was a rich heavy white gros grain cut en traine and measured just five yards from waist to train. The front of the dress was trimmed with numberless folds of the same material arranged en tablier and finished with [illegible] point. The tournure was bouffant, corsage decollete, handsomely trimmed with clusters of orange flowers, point lace and [illegible].

The [illegible] were formed of two [illegible] with [illegible] fall of lace. With this dress was a handsome barb [illegible] of point lace to match the elegant dress trimming. The [illegible] veil with appropriate [illegible] was held in place by a band or wreath of orange [illegible], fully three yards in length. The bouquet was of camelias with snow white [illegible].

The reception dress of lavender gros grain cut en train. The lower skirt completely covered with fringe to match the dress material. The trimming is festooned medallioned and waved until one is lost in wonder as to where the dress ends and the fringe begins. The overdress a la Comtesse is trimmed to correspond. Tournure bouffant. Corsage en Pompadour cut de collete with plain pointed fraise of dress material lined with rose color.

An elegant black gros grain a la Princess the skirt festooned with yards upon yards of nine inch thread headed by well defined points of black satin. Corsage a la Marie Antoinette.

With this dress a complete set of elegant laces are worn corresponding with the design of the trimming.

A carriage dress of violet and lavender gros grain cut with demi train and trimmed with graduated flounces, corsage high with French points.

Carriage dress No 2 of blue silk gros grain, the skirt cut with demi train and trimmed with narrow ruffles overdress bouffant and corded corsage a la Normandie.

A rose silk evening dress a la Princesse demi train corded and trimmed with folds heading longitudinal bonds tournure bouffant corsage [illegible] sleeves of double puffs finished with a deep fall of lace.

A black cashmere dress a la Princesse elaborately trimmed with silk of hand made embroidery, headed and fringed in a most artistic manner.

The lingerie is composed of a full list. There were three dozen [illegible] of each trimmed with the orthodox puffs and ruffles tucks, embroidered bands etc. The corsets are trimmed with thread and hand embroidery in pure white and finished with appropriate ornaments.

The fair bride is a lover of laces. She has every description of rare lace. She possesses some point in the old rare patterns; thread in shell and fern patterns barbs collars and fichus in thread Brussels and Honiton.

Her hosiery is of the daintiest and she owns slippers which Cinderella might have worn, gaiters, marvels of beauty, gloves of every variety with marked preference for the six and twelve-buttoned Harris necessitated for the style of sleeve now in vogue for full dress.

SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 21, 1874.

THE DOVE-COLORED SILK.

It's a kind of thoughtful arrangement on the part of their employers every domestic in the house of Sir John Dayton, barrister and banker, received his or her salary one week before Christmas Day.

Very bright and tempting looked the tiny pile of sovereigns that Lottie Warde, Miss Dayton's own maid, carried away to her chamber, and sat meditating over with a cloud on her pretty face such as it seldom wore. Last Christmas the spending of her money had cost her no trouble except a quickly stifled regret that she could not do more with it for the dear ones whose kisses and joyful thanks had been such pleasant requital of her generosity.

Although she was as dutiful and loving a daughter and as kind a sister as of yore, there had been an event in Lottie's life since the year began that was closely connected with the impatient sigh she gave as she sat gazing at her gold, and abstractedly turning it over and over in her palm. She had met at the house of an old friend of her late father a young man so well connected that many wondered he should think of wedding a girl who was in service. Mr Charles Morison, they argued, with his good prospects and excellent situation in the office of Smithson Brothers, ought to look higher for a wife than Lottie Warde, whose father had died bankrupt, and whose mother's sole dependence was the annuity some of Mr Warde's compassionate creditors had purchased for her. But if Charlie Morison heard these things hinted he laughed and forgot them. He loved Lottie for herself—her sweet temper, her good principles, and the pretty face and figure, that were always set off by the perfect neatness and propriety with which she dressed.

Lottie, however, had taken to heart many of the remarks made in her presence or told by ill natured friends, and had rather hastily decided in her own mind that the relatives of her affianced husband looked down upon her because of her position. This fancy—for it was no more—had made her shy of meeting them, and unwilling to accept the invitations so kindly sent to her. But Charlie had made a point of her acceding to her parents' wish that she should join the family party they always gathered round them at their handsome house at Clapham on the eve of the great festival, and as Miss Dayton had cheerfully consented to spare her, she had not been able to excuse herself.

Naturally timid and shrinking from strangers, Lottie looked forward to this visit as an ordeal rather than a pleasure. She was to be introduced to Charlie's married sister from Manchester and to the wealthy uncle from whom he had expectations, and her anxiety that they should think well of her culminated in the inquiry, "What shall I wear?"

It was no use discussing this question with her betrothed. She knew he would say that nothing could be in better taste than the well-fitting dark merino that had been her best dress since the commencement of the autumn. But Lottie had her share of girlish vanity, and as she raised her eyes to her looking-glass, a vision rose before her of a certain dove-colored silk in a mercer's window near St. Paul's that would become her admirably. It was true that such an expensive purchase would absorb every farthing in her possession, but she chose to ignore this. So strong grew the temptation, th— w— .. Lottie went that evening to visit her mother she lingered long at the mercer's window, and decided that on the morrow the dove-colored silk should be her own.

The children threw down their books and toys when Lottie entered, for they loved her dearly, and Mrs. Warde, though she had been wearing a very anxious face as she stitched busily at some childish garment, contrived to smile at her eldest daughter, who, however, was not easily deceived.

"Something has gone wrong, mother. I am sure of it from your looks. What is it?"

"Nothing you can alter, dear; nothing, in fact, I ought to dwell upon. I heard by chance, that the man through whose roguery your father failed has returned to England and is in prosperous circumstances, and it worried me for a little while to think that my excellent, upright husband went to his grave in sorrow and poverty, while this dishonest man holds up his head and grows rich; but it was only for a minute, child," and Mrs. Warde smiled now with less effort. "I know to whom I have committed my cause, and I will not murmur at anything He wills."

Lottie kissed the placid speaker affectionately, but she was not as sympathetic as usual. Her little sisters hung about her wondering whether they should have a Christmas pudding, and one of them blurted out a fact hitherto concealed, that mother did not go to church on Sunday till evening service because her shawl was so shabby. Lottie slid her hand into the pocket where lay her little purse, but drew it back again, telling herself that she could not possibly go to visit Charlie's friends meanly dressed, and when the youngest child climbed on her knee and frankly asked what she was going to bring him for a Christmas present he was set down again, and so sharply told not to tease, that Mrs. Warde's mild eyes were raised in surprise.

"I beg pardon, mother," said her daughter, coloring under the reproof the look conveyed. "I am afraid I am rather stupid this evening. What were you saying about Robert?—he is elected pupil teacher at his school. Of course he is—I knew he would be! he has worked so hard for it, dear good boy!" and she ran across the room to kiss the studious lad who warmly returned her caress.

"Then you're glad of it, Lottie? So am I, only I think mother's bothered about the books I shall want."

"Will they cost much?" asked his sister.

"Well, dear, it seems much to persons of our limited income," Mrs Warde replied. "And he must have a new suit of clothes. But I hope to manage it without running into debt if you can help me a little."

Lottie did not speak, and her mother thoughtfully added, "The girls will have to do without the hats I promised them, and [illegible]'s pelisse must last another Winter, and—"

But here her daughter stopped her by pettishly saying, "Oh, mother! pray don't tell us of any more wants, they seem endless. How miserable it is to be so poor, how sick of contrivances and makeshifts you must be. I know I am. And somehow the children always seem to need most when one has least to spare."

"I did not know you were in that predicament, dear, or I would not have spoken so plainly," Mrs Warde replied, "but don't let it worry you," she added, with the cheerful air that covered a multitude of anxious thoughts, "we shall manage very well, I dare say."

Lottie went away with her money still in her pocket, but with a load at her heart—half shame, half selfish ill humor—which was not lessened by standing at the mercer's window for another half hour before she went back to Sir John's. While her gaze was fixed on the silk her rebellious spirit was murmuring at the difficulties of her position. It was so hard that she should always be hampered with the home cares. Other young people could spend their salaries on themselves while her purse had such constant calls upon it that there was nothing left for herself. And mother was not thoughtful for her, she never seemed to remember that a girl of her age would naturally wish to be smart, especially when she visited persons in better circumstances than herself.

Miss Dayton wanted some trifle brought from her own room that evening, and Lottie had executed her commission and was retreating when the voice of Sir John, who was reading the evening paper, arrested her. "Dear me! how sad these cases are. One never knows who to trust. Listen to this, Letitia. The confidential clerk of Smithson Brothers absconded last night. His employers had had their suspicions aroused by some circumstance or other, and hinted an intention of looking into his accounts. As soon as he learned this he made business in the country a pretence for his flight, and it is supposed that he is on his way to America."

To Lottie's strained ears every word of this was horribly audible, and the next minute she was running down stairs, putting on her hat and shawl as she went.

"If I am asked for," she gasped to the wondering housekeeper, "say that I am ill—that I have gone to my mother's, but don't stop me—don't question me, or I shall die."

[illegible] was to the home of Austin Crawley, a fellow clerk of Charlie's, she first took her way. She would not give up all hope till she had seen him and heard his lips confirm the dreadful tale, and as she went along she tried to comfort herself in repeating, "It cannot be! Charlie Morison a defaulter, a fugitive from [illegible]—it's impossible!"

Mrs. Crawley herself answered Lottie's knock, and her smiling, cheerful face made the girl feel her own misery grow sharper.

"No, Austin had not returned from the city yet," she said. "Would not Lottie come in and wait for him? She was quite alone, for Mr. Crawley had been at Smithson's all day, taking the place (she believed) of Charlie Morison, whose absence seemed to have put the firm very much out of their way. There was nothing amiss was there?" she added, as she took a closer survey of her visitor's face.

[illegible] unanswered, for Lottie was already hurrying away. The last faint hope that there might be some dreadful mistake had perished before Mrs. Crawley's placid utterance. Austin, the gay and careless, whose spendthrift habits had often displeased his parents, had proved his integrity, while Charlie Morison, the son of many prayers, the [illegible] intellectual young man who indulged in no low taste [illegible] had ruined his character and disgraced his family—this was her conclusion.

Away through the busiest streets of London, hurrying on with her face muffled in her veil, lest any one should perceive the anguish depicted on it, she walked till she found herself before the well known offices of Messrs. Smithson. They had been closed hours earlier, but the old man who was porter and care taker was standing at the door talking to some curious acquaintances.

Unperceived by the garrulous speaker, Lottie paused long enough to hear her lover's name coupled with words indistinctly caught relating to the large sums of money that were missing.

"His father was here this morning as soon as the news was made public," the porter went on—"such a respectable old gentleman!" But here his voice was lowered, and Lottie passed by, hearing only something about the young man's broken hearted mother as she went; but it reminded her that she was not alone in her grief; that the loving parents who had cherished their son in his childhood and seen him gradually expand into the bright intelligent man, must be well nigh crushed beneath the blow that had so suddenly fallen upon them. Oh! what was her grief to theirs!

And now Lottie flew to her own haven, the arms of her mother, and there wept the first tears her burning eyes had shed.

Shocked, and for some time incredulous, Mrs. Warde, with infinite patience and tenderness, sustained her child during those hours in which her anguish was almost more than she could bear.

Never again would Lottie accuse this dear friend and comforter of being wanting in sympathy. Who else would have borne so kindly with her wild bursts of impatient sorrow, her restless pacings to and fro, her passionate complainings? Who else so skilfully taking advantage of her better feelings to bring her to her knees and teach her to bow her head to the Divine will?

"How good are you to me, darling mother," she sobbed, when Mrs. Warde had prevailed upon her to lie down, and was bathing her aching head, "and, indeed, I don't deserve it. I have been so selfish, so ungrateful, that if you knew all my hard and bitter thoughts, you would cease to love me at all."

Mrs. Warde's only reply was to stoop and kiss her, and that kiss uprooted the last fibre of selfishness in her child's heart. Never again did Lottie let vanity stand in the place of duty, and in the midst of her trouble, she could be humbly thankful that this dear mother was still all her own.

All that night she wept and bewailed herself, but when morning dawned and she saw how weary and exhausted Mrs. Warde was looking, Lottie put her good intentions in practice and restrained her grief.

While her mother rested she moved quietly about dressing the little ones, whom her altered looks and swollen eyes awed into unwonted soberness, nor was it till every task had been accomplished that could spare Mrs. Warde fatigue, that she seated herself at her mother's feet and wept herself into the sleep of exhaustion.

But stronger arms were sustaining her when, with a start, she awoke. It was not the mild face of her mother that bent over her and smiled at her, it was Charlie Morison himself, and for a moment she believed herself to be in a happy dream.

"Can it be you?" she asked wistfully. "Speak to me, for I know not what to think, or what to believe."

"You may believe that Charles Morison has committed no act that disgraces him," said her rejoicing mother, who stood by. "Need we tell you more?"

Lottie pressed her hands to her head and looked from one to the other, till the tender smile on Charlie's lips confirmed the tidings.

"I seem too much bewildered to be as glad as I should be," she exclaimed. "Am I really awake?—has there been no robbery after all? That dreadful newspaper!—why did I believe the paragraph Sir John read from it?"

"Sit down here, you poor, pale child," said Charlie, "and let me help you out of your mystification. I think it began the night before last when I sought you at Sir John's to say good bye before I went on a hurried journey, and to tell you the two-fold object of it.

"I had heard, dear, that the man who was the cause of all your father's misfortunes was at Birmingham, and Messrs. Smithson freely gave me permission to go there and see whether my remonstrance and, if these failed, my threats to expose his nefarious proceedings, would induce him to do justice to your father's widow and orphans."

"And you succeeded?"

"Beyond my expectations. I have just had the pleasure of putting into your mother's hands a sum that will enable her to educate her children with comfort."

Lottie was obliged to interrupt him that she might throw her arms around Mrs. Warde's neck, and congratulate her rapturously. Then Charlie himself had to be thanked in loving, tearful whispers, and then so many pleasant little plans were discussed for the widow's future that some time elapsed before they recurred to the explanation.

"When I had completed my own business Messrs. Smithson desired me to go to Sheffield and make some inquiries there for them. The drift of these I scarcely understood when I started, but I soon discovered that they had reference to certain suspicions they were entertaining."

"But not of you, Charlie?"

"No, my love, they have never had any reason to doubt my integrity, and they have just proved their confidence in it by promising me an increase of salary. But another of their clerks, led into temptation by a love of gayety—"

"I see it all now," sighed Lottie. "Poor Austin!"

Charlie resumed: "My father, for whom as an old friend Messrs. Smithson sent to assist them in breaking the news to his parents, can scarcely bear to speak of the scenes he witnessed. Mrs. Crawley is very ill, Lottie. The truth was concealed from her as long as possible. It was not until late last night that she learnt that it was to hear the tale of her son's guilt that Mr. Crawley was summoned to the city, and it appears that no one had suspected how while Austin was believed to be quietly sleeping he had packed a portmanteau and stolen out of the house in the dead of the night to embark for America."

And so Lottie's joy in her betrothed's innocence was tempered by the knowledge that if his parents had been happily spared such deep sorrow, others were enduring it.

She spent her Christmas Eve at Clapham, but not in the dove colored silk. She was clad soberly in the dark merino, and heard, with a drooping head and a troubled conscience, Mrs. Morison tell her how fully she and her husband approved their son's choice, and how her conduct as a daughter and sister had won their esteem long since.

"I am not half as good as you think me," Lottie tearfully confessed, and deepened their interest in her by her honesty.

After all it was Mrs. Warde who wore the dove-colored silk at her daughter's wedding. It was made up for her by Lottie herself, who, as her needle passed in and out of her work, drew from the events connected with her purchase the lesson every wise or foolish deed conveys to the heart that is open to receive it.

THE PENSION TO MRS. CANBY.—The Senate did a just thing the other day in voting a pension to the widow of Gen. Canby. It might have been more generous, but these perhaps are not the times when public men can afford to practice the virtue of generosity even at the public expense. It is hardly creditable to the ex-officers of the army that so exceptional a case as that of Gen. Canby received no notice at their hands. Even the effort in this city among former officers of the army and navy to raise a small sum to provide for any immediate necessity in which the faithful General's family might have been placed was an utter failure, the officers applied to excusing themselves on the ground that, if they began in this case, there was no telling where they would end.—N. Y. Tribune, March 5th.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

Financial.

FRIDAY EVENING, March 20, 1874.

Gold in New York 111⅞.

Portland Legal Tenders buying 89, selling 90.

Gold bars are quotable at 725@750 fine.

Exchange on New York ½ per cent premium for currency, and one per cent premium for gold.

Exchange on San Francisco at ¾ of 1 per cent premium.

Wheat in Liverpool by mail advices from San Francisco 12s 6d@12s 7d for average California and 12s 9d@13s for club.

The apparent condition of our local finances is not changed in important features, but there seems to be many indications of greater activity to begin at an early day in the demand for funds to carry on improvements now in contemplation, and if the first two thirds of the present year on this part of our coast are not marked by great prosperity there is likely to be a surer, wiser, healthier and more permanent development alike of the natural resources and the manufacturing interests of the country. The opportunities for securing the necessary means to accomplish these desirable objects are much better than they were a year ago. From the East comes the news that the supply of money at the principal financial centers is quite adequate to and in some instances in excess of the demand. When the reasonable prospect of profit on investment which may be expected on the North Pacific coast is generally understood among capitalists at the East there is no reason why some of the surplus capital now idle or loaned at the East at 5@6 per cent, should not find its way here where it can be profitably employed at 8@9 per cent.

A Washington dispatch says the order of the Secretary of the Treasury to sell four millions of Gold does not meet with favor from the business community at large. Dispatches received take the ground that these sales will do no good, as the currency realized from them goes into the Treasury and is locked up and put out again as the Secretary sees fit to the disturbance of business. The universal demand is for Congress to define more explicitly the powers of the Secretary of the Treasury in the sales of gold and the use of the reserves.

Further advices say the Secretary is of opinion that with the sale of Gold by the Treasury to the extent of $[illegible],000,000 during the present month he will be able to meet all demands on the Treasury without further calling out the legal tender reserves, $[illegible],000,000 of which are now outstanding.

Miscellaneous.

National bank notes are superabundant in Wall street and are at a small discount compared with legal tenders. The banks are talking of organizing an Assorting House at their own expense to enforce the redemption of these notes.

The shipbuilding interests of the country are in a promising and prosperous condition. In the yards of Maine alone there will be one hundred and thirty thousand tons built the present year, or about fifty per cent more than last year, though last year's record was ten per cent better than that of any previous one. The revival of this important industry seems to be extending itself to nearly all the old ship building ports.

Every country in Europe imported wheat from us last season, and France and England, the largest importing countries, are still without supplies adequate to the demand between the present time and the next harvest. The amount we sent to England last year was 19,742,000 cwt, or 36,840,000 bushels, the value of which in gold was $61,000,000. The importations of France amounted to about forty one millions of dollars.

We see in a Pennsylvania paper a statement that a farmer in that state had succeeded last year in raising [illegible] bushels of wheat to the acre. What would that paper think of the Oregon farm which will produce 40 or [illegible] bushels per acre without extra pains.

During the month of February there were [illegible] disasters to vessels bound to and from ports in the United States, involving a loss of $[illegible],000. There is still a good demand for ship property, but owing to high prices and the few vessels offering, transactions are limited. The February sales at New York embraced the ship Carrier Dove, 1,6[illegible] tons, built in 1855 and metaled in 1871, for $40,000. The same price was paid for the ship Carondelet, 1,390 tons, built five years later, and metaled in 1872. The ship N. B. Palmer, 1,1[illegible] tons, built in 1850 and metaled two years ago, realized about $[illegible]. Several smaller vessels sold at from $[illegible] to $10,000 apiece.

Shipping Intelligence.

The bark Cordoba has discharged most of her ballast and will begin to receive her cargo of grain early next week.

The bark Annie Weston is on her way to Portland to load wheat.

The ship Lady Lilly Langton went down the river to-day with [illegible] bushels of wheat for Europe. She will receive an additional quantity at some point below.

The steamship Oriflamme for San Francisco with a full freight, consisting mainly of wheat, flour, oats, potatoes and apples, will sail at 4 P. M. to-morrow.
